Workshop at The Free Library of Philadelphia

Friday, April 12, 2019, 1 – 3 pm

The Heim Center, Parkway Central Library

1901 Vine Street, Philadelphia, PA 19103

Can a water clock, a blue-foam head, and a glass tooth interrupt the unavoidable antagonisms of working together? Visual artist Caroline Woolard, the inaugural Walentas Fellow at Moore College of Art and Design, will facilitate a workshop on socially engaged art during the opening weekend celebration for the Reimagined Parkway Central Library. Workshop participation is limited to students, faculty, and staff of Moore College, though members of the public are welcome and encouraged to observe. Woolard's project at the Free Library will culminate in a permanent installation of lending objects in the new Heim Center for Cultural and Civic Engagement.
